Kerrobert's Austin Shepherd named RBC Community Ambassador

BY KATE WINQUIST

The Melfort Mustangs are proud to recognize Kerrobert's Austin Shepherd as the team's RBC Community Ambassador for the 2025 season.

The Mustangs say Shepherd has set the standard for leadership and community involvement, leading by example through his reliability, respect and accountability. Known for his strong communication skills, Shepherd consistently goes out of his way to ensure everyone feels included, taking time to connect with kids and make them feel heard.

Shepherd volunteers twice weekly with the Learn to Skate program and Minor Hockey, and also assists with a morning skills skate twice a week. He has been involved with the Read with the Mustangs program at the Melfort Public Library for the past two seasons and is often among the first to step up when help is needed.

In recognition of his impact, RBC is donating $1,000 to Brunswick School in Shepherd's name.

RBC Community Ambassadors are honoured for giving back to the communities where they play, with one ambassador selected league-wide as the RBC Community Award recipient at the end of the SJHL regular season through an online fan vote.

Kindersley air cadet squadron marks retirement of Capt. Monte Sheppard

BY KATE WINQUIST

For more than four decades, Captain Monte Sheppard has dedicated his life to service — first to Canada's Navy and later to the young people of the Kindersley community. Earlier this month, members of the Kindersley 365 Air Cadet Squadron gathered to thank him as he officially retired after 20 years with the program.

Sheppard's military career began in November 1980 when he joined the Royal Canadian Navy. Over 24 years of service, he served aboard numerous vessels, worked with training ships, commanded gate vessels and minesweepers, and took part in destroyer escort operations.

After retiring from the Navy in 2004, Sheppard wasn't finished serving. On Dec. 7, 2006, he joined the Cadet Instructor Cadre (CIC) with the Canadian Air Force, bringing decades of experience, discipline and leadership to the Kindersley 365 Air Cadets. He spent his entire cadet career with the local squadron, becoming a familiar and steady presence to generations of cadets.

Over the years, Sheppard filled nearly every major role within the squadron, including range officer, training officer and commanding officer. He retires as the squadron's supply officer, closing a chapter defined by dedication, mentorship and countless hours volunteered behind the scenes.

While Cadet Instructor Cadre officers are required to retire at age 65 and Sheppard's official last day is Jan. 15, the squadron chose to honour him early with a retirement parade night on Jan. 8.

The evening brought together current cadets, fellow officers and many former cadets — some returning after years away — to share stories, laughter and memories that reflected the lasting impact Sheppard has had on their lives.

As part of the celebration, Sheppard was presented with a King's Shilling, a traditional naval gift for retiring officers. The pewter, glass-bottom mug, with a shilling encased in its base, served as a symbolic link between his naval career and his years mentoring youth.

Those who worked alongside him say Sheppard's calm leadership, commitment and genuine care for cadets will be remembered long after his final parade. His legacy lives on in the confidence, skills and values he helped instill in countless young people in the Kindersley community.

and very supportive."

The Prairie Crocus Quilt Guild in Kindersley continues to grow as millennials and baby boomers come together to share their love of quilting. Chairperson Regan Overand reports the guild now has 28 members, with the most recent joining last month.

Quilters travel from Eston, Eatonia, Kerrobert, Smiley, Pinkham, Major and Kindersley to attend meetings, which are held on the second Tuesday evening of each month at the Kindersley Seniors Centre.

Overand has been a member of the guild for five years and has been quilting for 15 years. She notes that quilters of all skill levels — from beginners to seasoned experts — are welcome to join.

While some members have been crafting quilts for decades, Overand says eight members balance their passion for quilting with raising families and building careers. The guild has been active since 1982, and long-standing members are enthusiastic about welcoming younger women into the group.

"A lot of the younger ones learn by watching YouTube," Overand explained. In contrast, senior quilters remember taking classes offered at Veronica's Sewing Supplies. "They have knowledge and experience and can help us. It can be intimidating for younger quilters, but they're very welcoming Beyond quilting, the guild provides an opportunity to socialize and build friendships. Members also participate in weekend retreats held periodically and host a quilt show every second year during Goose Festival, where approximately 200 quilts are displayed.

"There's a group of ladies that do a lot of charity quilting," Overand said. Quilts have been donated to the hospital and fire department, and over the past four years, members have made quilts for all residents at West Central Abilities. "Every Christmas we make placemats for Meals on Wheels," she added. "It's a way to use our talents and give back to the community."

New members also bring fresh ideas and styles to the craft. Overand is currently updating a family tree quilt for her husband's family that was originally started in 2000. "I keep adding a big border so there's more room for additions," she said. Another member created a quilt using T-shirts from her high school years.

While quilting styles, techniques and tools have evolved over time, the motivation behind the craft remains unchanged. "I quilt all year long in my basement. I find it stress relieving," Overand said. "I mostly make quilts for friends and family. When people appreciate it, it makes it all worthwhile."

Non-Profit & Volunteer Events & Fundraisers

We're always glad to help spread the word about local events and fundraisers whenever we can.

We're a small, locally owned newspaper, and advertising is what keeps the paper going each week. It helps cover printing, delivery, and the work that goes into keeping local news and community updates in front of people. For that reason, we aren't able to provide free advertising by request — if we did, we simply couldn't stay in business.

That said, we do have a couple of great options for non-profit groups:

1) Upcoming Events Listing (no charge):

We offer a basic non-profit listing on our Upcoming Events page. We keep it short (about 20 words) — the what / when / where plus a contact number (no pricing or extra details).

2) Discounted Non-Profit Advertising:

If you're looking for more visibility, we also offer a reduced non-profit advertising rate, and we're happy to work with almost any budget (even a small one) to get you the best reach possible.

Send us the event details and your deadline — and let us know whether you'd like the free Upcoming Events listing, an ad option, or a mix of both! We are happy to help!

Quilters share their warmth with others

BY JOAN JANZEN

The quilters have been busy this winter and are sharing their warmth with others. Last week, the Laporte quilting group presented seventeen of their handmade quilts to the Kindersley Hospital.

Eighteen members from the Laporte group get together once a week in the basement of the Laporte Community Hall. Virginia Klarenbach started the group back in 1999, and it has been forging ahead ever since.

"We've lost some members, but we always seem to find someone to fill the spot, and we don't have to work hard at it either," Virginia said. "For most people, it becomes an addiction. It gives a lot of satisfaction and is a stress reliever." One of their 89-year-old members continues to enjoy her addiction of creating numerous quilts for her family.

They also do some charity work. "Just recently, we donated 163 small blankets to the NICU at the Jim Pattison Children's Hospital," Virginia reported.

The quilts make beautiful gifts, and the group enjoys getting together with friends. "It's a great outing and support system," she explained. "It's great for anybody who lives on their own."

Anika Becker, Clinical Services Manager; Courtney Weenk, RN; Jessica Ross; Taryn Murphy, RN; and Adeline Hailbert, RN. "The Kindersley & District Health Facility extends a heartfelt thank you for the generous donation of handmade crochet blankets and quilts. This kindness will bring comfort and warmth to residents and patients when they need it most." SUBMITTED

Business owner charged in arson that destroyed Leader business

LEADER, Sask. — RCMP have charged the owner of a business destroyed by fire in southwestern Saskatchewan last fall following a months-long investigation.

Leader RCMP say a 50-year-old man from Calgary was arrested Jan. 26 in connection with a fire that destroyed a business in the community of Leader in October 2025.

Rajjinderpal Basran is charged with one count of arson with intent to defraud, one count of fraud over $5,000 and one count of arson with disregard for human life under the Criminal Code. Basran was the owner of the business that burned.

Basran is scheduled to appear in provincial court in Leader on March 19.

The fire occurred early on Oct. 26, 2025. RCMP say officers were called to a structure fire at a business on 1st Avenue at about 2:40 a.m. Local firefighters also responded, but the building was destroyed.

In the days following the fire, RCMP said evidence suggested the blaze was suspicious. Fire investigators with the Saskatchewan Public Safety Agency were brought in to help determine the fire's cause and origin.

As the investigation continued, police released surveillance video in December showing a suspect arriving at the business, breaking in and later leaving the area in a dark-coloured SUV. At the time, RCMP said the vehicle closely resembled a Jeep and asked the public for help identifying both the suspect and the vehicle.

RCMP have not said whether tips from the public contributed to the arrest. Police say the investigation remains ongoing.

4 stimulating activities for a HEALTHY BRAIN after 50

Have you passed the 50 mark and want to keep your mind sharp for as long as possible? Experts agree that you can slow cognitive decline by stimulating your brain every day. Simple, fun activities are sure to help. Here are four to explore.

1. GAMES

Sudoku, crosswords, brain teasers and chess all require strategy and concentration. They challenge your brain and keep it active. Board games give you the chance to play with your children, grandchildren or friends. The social aspect boosts your mood while you exercise your mind.

2. FOREIGN LANGUAGES

Are you looking for a challenge? Learning a new language will surely put your brain to the test. Mobile apps and online courses can make it easy for you to explore Spanish, Italian, German and more. Why not set yourself the goal of practising to become more fluent before your next trip?

3. VOLUNTEERING

Giving your time to people in need or an organization that shares your values is also a great way to keep your brain active. Meeting new people with similar interests can help break the cycle of loneliness and reduce anxiety and depression. Contact your local community centre to find out what options are available to you.

4. READING

Whether you prefer books, magazines, comics or newspapers, reading offers many benefits. It stimulates the imagination, strengthens focus and sharpens visual processing. Most importantly, reading has a direct impact on memory. Visit your neighbourhood library, join a book club or read your local newspaper.

Stay healthy with mental stimulation! It's one of the best ways to enjoy all the wonderful things life has to offer for many years to come.

Ideas for rediscovering!—your INNER CHILD

As you get older, it can become harder to maintain a sense of wonder or approach life with a lighthearted attitude. Worrying about what others think about you or the fear of appearing "unserious" can hold you back. Is it still possible to let your inner child shine? Here are a few ideas to explore.

SPEND TIME OUTDOORS

Hiking in the mountains or walking in the park are excellent ways to refocus on the present moment. A connection with nature allows you to engage your senses the way you did as a child. Take a moment to smell the flowers, listen to the birds singing and touch the bark of a tree. You're sure to feel younger.

INDULGE IN A SWEET TREAT

Children love sweets, and for good reason. These foods activate the brain's reward system. If your health allows, go ahead and indulge. Does a particular treat remind you of family outings or friends from school? Savour it fully to relive those wonderful memories.

REVISIT AN OLD HOBBY

Remember how you loved to sketch and doodle when you were younger? Were you quite skilled at playing the guitar or piano? Set aside a few moments throughout the week to explore an activity you've left behind over the years. It will boost your mood and help nurture your creative side, two essentials for keeping your mind sharp.

Explore the world without exhausting yourself: try a MINI CRUISE

Seeing new places and enjoying fresh air are wonderful ways to unwind and recharge your batteries while travelling. However, the experience can be demanding, especially as you grow older or manage health challenges. Fortunately, there's an option that lets you experience adventure without wearing yourself out. Discover the advantages of a mini cruise.

SHORTER EXCURSIONS

Whereas a traditional cruise can last anywhere from several days to several weeks, a mini cruise—as the name suggests—is a shorter alternative. These short excursions are typically based around a single city, making them an ideal option for families with young children or people with reduced mobility. Most are affordable and last anywhere from forty-five minutes to a few hours.

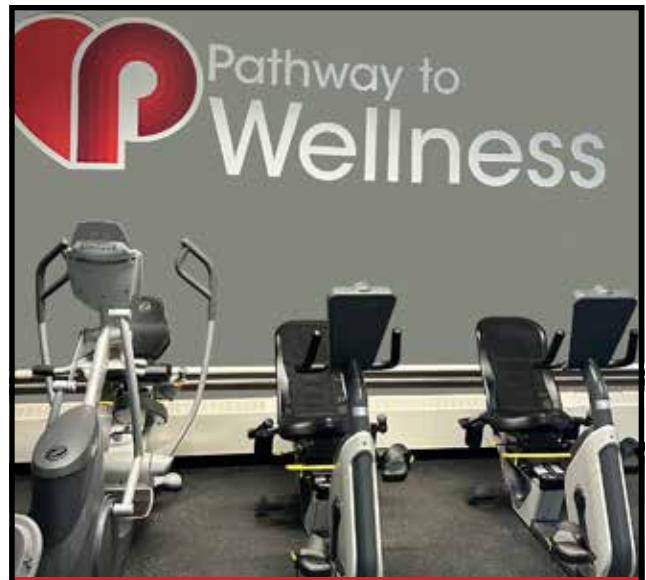

VARIED AND FUN OPTIONS

Mini cruise organizers offer a wide range of excursions. Depending on your preferences or thirst for adventure, you might choose:

- A gourmet cruise, to enjoy a delicious brunch or dinner while taking in fabulous views of a large modern city or picturesque town
- An educational cruise, to learn about historical sites or monuments, with interpretation by professional guides
- A wildlife viewing cruise, to admire marine mammals or unique bird species

These short excursions are the perfect way to travel without getting exhausted. Contact a local cruise company that offers mini cruises and set off on your next adventure.

Manage your health, mobility or begin your Wellness Journey in a safe and monitored environment or join a class all led by our Exercise Therapist!

Spock would describe recent happenings as “highly illogical”

If you’re a Star Trek fan, you may recall Spock raising his eyebrows and describing the actions of the native inhabitants of planet Omega IV as “highly illogical.” The phrase would be repeated in subsequent films and is also a fitting description of what’s happening in Canada.

Canadian taxpayers have witnessed the federal bureaucracy increase year after year, while almost half of their income goes towards taxes, which finance our growing government. To put it in perspective, the Canadian Taxpayers Federation (CTF) noted the amount the government spent on federal bureaucracy last year is equivalent to three times the entire budget of Saskatchewan.

However, it looks like the government is attempting to remedy the situation. The Canada Minute newsletter reported over 10,000 federal public servants received notice in January that the government plans to cut 28,000 positions over the next four years across twelve departments. Unions warned the reductions will affect essential services, causing longer wait times and weaker programs. But according to information provided by the CTF, this may not be true.

Franco Terrazzano from CTF gave the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) as an example. The CRA added 13,015 employees since 2016, a 33 percent increase. Nevertheless, the Auditor General’s report said the CRA gave the correct answer about personal tax questions 17 percent of the time and that only one-third of Canadians who phoned the CRA actually got through to a live agent.

Furthermore, the CTF reports there are seven federal departments and agencies that have more than doubled their number of employees since 2016. Em-

Opinion
By Joan Janzen

“That says to me that adding more bureaucrats doesn’t improve services.”

Franco Terrazzano
Canadian Taxpayers Federation

ployment and Social Development Canada added the most employees, which amounted to 16,842 additional employees since 2016—a 75 per cent increase.

Meanwhile, unions are demanding the government explain why experienced public servants are facing workforce reductions as outsourcing spending reaches record highs. However, increased outsourcing spending is not a new expenditure. Let’s take a look.

The CTF reported that even though the cost of the federal bureaucracy increased 80 percent in the past ten years (from $39.6 billion in 2015 to $71.4 billion in 2025), the government also spent an additional $23.1 billion on outsourcing services in 2025. That cost includes the services of consultants and contractors, which increased 11 percent over the previous year. In fact, Franco said the cost of outsourcing spending more than doubled during the past ten years.

While unions claim staff reductions will cause weaker programs, Franco made an observation that proves otherwise. “The government actually tracks government performance; you can find it online,” he said on a CTF podcast. “Over the last five years, they only met half of their own performance targets three times. They met less than 54 percent of their own performance targets in their best year.”

However, records show those same employees are rewarded for their poor performance, since the government approved $406 million in bonuses in 2023–2024.

When Canadians were asked by Leger, a national polling firm, if they thought federal services improved since 2015, fifty-four percent of Canadians said services have gotten worse since 2015.

“That says to me that adding more bureaucrats doesn’t improve services,” he concluded.

In an attempt to remedy the situation, the government departments are offering early retirement without incurring a pension penalty. An article in the National Post delved into the early retirement offers. The headline reads: “Plan to reduce civil service will cost $1.5 billion to cut payroll by just $82 million.”

The article reads, “According to federal budget documents, the proposed early retirement incentive will cost an average of $300 million for five years, all to deliver ongoing savings of $82 million annually.” The article continues to say, “It wouldn’t be until 2044 that the expected savings from the incentive would match the cost of making them.”

Ryan Davies, host of Northern Perspective, made the following observation. “So if you’re paying public servants to leave on top of what they normally get, and it’s going to take almost 20 years to get the savings back, what’s the point? If you’re going to cut them, then cut them.”

Franco from CTF voiced a similar observation. “The promise in the last budget is that in a couple of years Ottawa’s headcount will be brought down to what it was at the end of 2021, during the heart of the pandemic spending spree,” he explained. “If bureaucrats are cut by 10 percent while bonuses and costs continue to go up, by 2028 it will still cost taxpayers about $3 billion more than the bureaucracy cost in 2022, even after adjusting for inflation.”

Meanwhile, Canadians realize that the 99,000 additional employees added to the federal government during the past ten years doesn’t mean taxpayers are receiving better service.

“You’re not really saving money if it’s costing you money to send these people on their way,” Ryan said. “If the point is to save taxpayer money, then save taxpayer money. Otherwise, there’s no point to it.”

Or as Spock would say, “highly illogical.”

Sane time or screen time?

Over the years I've written and performed literally 100s of performances. But one, called "Sacred Agents," keeps coming back to haunt me. It focused on the ways a new technology, called the "World Wide Web," would change our lives by hooking us to our computer screens.

Pop89

By Madonna Hamel

I was just beginning to use a computer at the time. Up until then, I wrote everything by hand. Suffice it to say—I had no idea how a screen would alter our world, and our perceptions of it. Let alone our understanding of our relationships with the world and others. Above all, I could not grasp how thoroughly and rapidly the notion of "reality as relative" would turn our computers into silos, hiving us off from each other.

In my research I learned about a new illness attributed to the "internet." "Cyber sickness," manifested in the body as nausea, dizziness, vertigo, and insomnia. (Obesity and ADD came later.) The mental and psychic troubles included: extreme anxiety, hyper-vigilance, and dissociation. I came to understand that the internet, contrary to its promises, gave us hyper-connectivity without agency.

"Here is the body, made of flesh and bone, blood and guts, sweat and tears. Not buttons, not wires. But where is the dignity to which this animal aspires?"

Flash forward a few decades and Western culture is experiencing rampant use of a drug called: the screen. Psychologists, parents, cultural critics, spiritual advisors, and spouses spend hours discussing concerns around healthy amounts of "screen time."

"Screen time" starts early. I read that "experts suggest limiting non-educational screen time to under one hour a day for ages 2-5." Two- to five-year-olds are hooked on their screens? I didn't start using my opposable thumbs until I was ten! Those two-year-olds will not be self-policing. Who is going to watch the ponies now that they've already left the yard?

And so I give you: Top Ten Reasons For Walking Away From the Screen.

1. For most of us, movies were our gateway drug. The screen models behaviour. As a teen, I remember reading the words at the bottom of movie ads—"Warning: contains sex and violence." I thought: "They should say, Promise: contains sex and violence." Hollywood made sex violent and violence sexy; Mr. and Mrs. America became Mr. Violence and Mrs. Sexy.

I have an Oscar night fantasy. It involves actors, one after another, stepping up to the podium and announcing they will no longer portray gun-toting hotties in propaganda films. No more pumped-up, scowling, chest-baring, rationalizing loose cannons brandishing the kind of firearms accessorizing every ICE agent in Minnesota. And no more frightened citizens packing pistols as a solution to "taking on the system," either.

Imagine an actor who can see beyond the myopic vision of a culture they participated in creating? A culture that shoots first and asks questions never.

2. The screen robs us of our own imaginations. We can turn off the screen and tell our own stories, and be a character in our own story. As Harold Johnson writes: "A victim is a character in someone else's story." Don't be a victim.

3. The ubiquitous screen has dulled us, lulled us, made us feel helpless and hopeless. When the newscaster is about to show us a video of a citizen being shot 8-9-10 times, do we look away when she says: "These images may be disturbing to some?" There is no "safe word" when masochistically exposing ourselves to the sadism emitting from the screen. Nor is there a magic word for bringing back the capacity to still feel disturbed, concerned, tender. Many screens produce much numbness. If you want to preserve your remaining shred of human dignity, turn off the screen. Go outside.

4. Screens make reality seem relative. Once separated from reality, our experience is mediated by the screen. In the comfort and safety of our buildings, we become entertained by the darkest behaviours. Along with Trump, we watch Venezuela burn. "I watched it literally, like I was watching a TV show. And if you would have seen the speed, the violence. It was amazing." If only we had his kind of access to the "amazing" violence. Oh well—pass the popcorn.

5. Then there's the phone screen. How many natural vistas have we missed, sitting in the back seat, playing video games? How creepy is the energy a man gives off while looking at porn on his phone, held under the restaurant table, while mom tries to keep a conversation going with the children, pretending she doesn't know what he's looking at—knowing she's lost him to the biggest addiction the screen ever enabled. As a new CBC reporter, I was chilled by a trade magazine columnist proclaiming the new opportunities that came with the invention of the cell phone: "Now you can watch your favourite porn at the family picnic," he wrote.

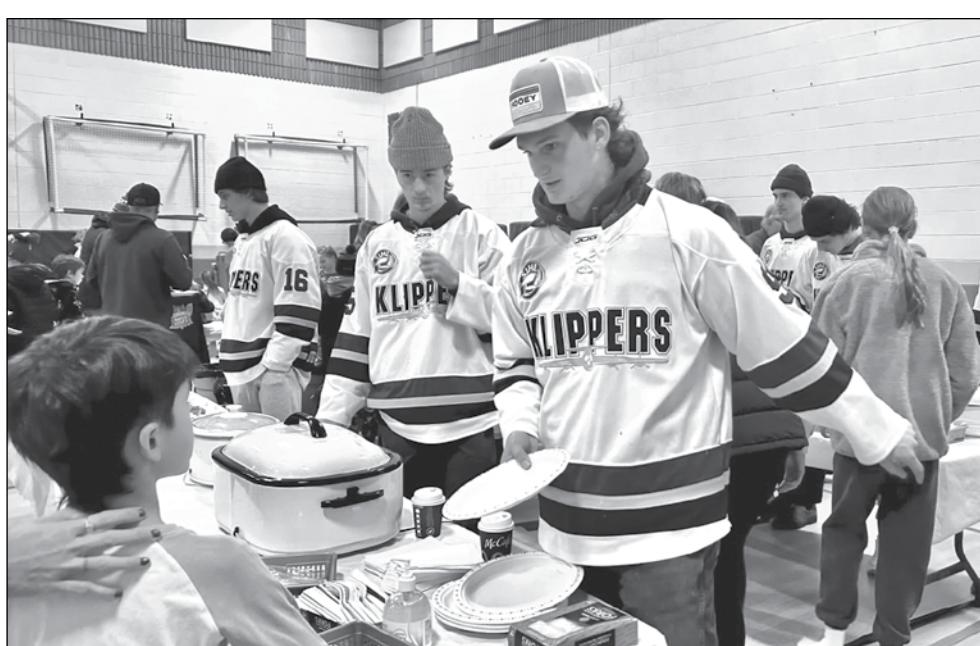

6. Screen time is what people like Trump live for. They scrounge around at the bottom of the barrel for attention-grabbing trash talk. Like we would for a toddler or a teen, we need to take away his screen time. To reporters: quit scurrying after him for a quote that won't make sense, or give clarity, or show any semblance of connection to the truth. Yes, I know: the longer the rant, the easier it is to get a jaw-droppingly cruel or bombastic clip. Why, it's like shooting fish in a barrel—there are so many choices! Until: who cares if it's true? Lies sell even better.

7. Your screen decides for you. It lines up your "choices," so you don't have to.

8. The screen ignores the wild world just outside your door. Encountering the Great Outdoors is still the best response to the damage done by the screen. Reject the algorithms and get back your own—and the earth's—bodily rhythm.

9. The screen ignores your soul because it isn't aware souls exist.

10. The screen ignores other souls, as well. We get our souls back by greeting and meeting others, soul-to-soul—through genuine and gentle encounters with ourselves and with each other. We start by shaking hands (or paws), or holding hands. And, in my case, writing everything by hand, again.

"Where Quality Comes First!"

Just a gal from Glidden

Hope springs eternal (and please, please let it be cloudy)

BY KATE WINQUIST

Well, here we are—already into February. How did that happen? February always brings with it that age-old question: will that furry little rodent see his shadow or won't he? I can never remember whether we're supposed to cheer or groan, so I finally looked it up. If the groundhog emerges from his burrow and sees his shadow, he scurries back inside and we're stuck with six more weeks of winter. If he doesn't see it, spring arrives early.

So please, please let it be cloudy on Monday.

Now, I'll admit, this winter hasn't been that bad—but as the saying goes, "Hope springs eternal," and lately it feels like we could all use a healthy dose of that.

February is also Heart Month, and our friends at the Kindersley & District Health & Wellness Board will once again be canvassing for donations for their Heart to Heart campaign. This year's focus is on updating the dining area for residents at Heritage Manor, along with purchasing a much-needed Medication Cart for Acute Care. The estimated cost for these projects is approximately $65,000. So when that familiar pink piece of paper shows up in your mailbox, I hope you'll consider supporting this very worthwhile cause.

And speaking of hearts... is love in the air?

Valentine's Day isn't just for romantic couples. It's a chance to celebrate every kind of love in your life—your friends, your children, your family members, and yes, even your co-workers. Everyone deserves to be reminded how much they're appreciated.

This time of year always makes me reflect on lifelong friendships—especially since one of my dearest friends is celebrating a birthday this week. Back in high school, we had a pretty tight-knit group, and every time I look at this photo of the nine of us (circa 1987), I can't help but smile. Is it the acid-wash jeans? The industrial-strength hairspray? The hairstyles that required both commitment and courage?

Probably all of the above.

What a time it was—playing basketball, cruising Main Street for hours on end, passing notes in Mr. Gordon's Biology class, drinking Bianca in Erickson's basement... Some of those stories may or may not be suitable for print. I'm not saying I'd want to relive my high school days, but I would love to pile into Koska's big red Suburban one more time, crank up some Bon Jovi, Poison, or Tom Petty (sorry, Danora—I know you still don't like Tom Petty!), and just go for a drive.

I consider myself incredibly fortunate that after being away for almost 30 years, I was able to come back to Kindersley and still sit down for lunch with a few of these beauties, picking up conversations as if I had never left. Those friendships are forever treasured.

New friendships have blossomed over the years as well, especially through work. Joan Janzen is one of the most thoughtful and caring individuals you could ever hope to meet. Greg Paulhus and I have known each other since Grade 1 at Westberry School, and truthfully, without Greg's support—especially when it came to creating our website and sharing his knowledge of the newspaper industry—I'm not sure I would have felt comfortable starting from scratch.

And then there's the woman I work alongside every week through texts and emails: Patti Moran, whom I have never met in person. Patti works remotely from our nation's capital, and sometimes I wonder if we weren't separated at birth (even though she is MUCH older than I). We are clearly wired the same. We'll text each other at the exact same moment, asking the exact same thing. Honestly, it kind of freaks me out.

So on February 14, do something small to show your appreciation for someone you love. Better yet—don't limit it to just one day. Let the people in your life know how much they mean to you, and the positive impact they have simply by being there.

Because love, like hope, is always worth sharing.

Koepka alone in return to PGA Tour

What could have been a mad dash by some of the greatest golfers in the world from the upstart LIV tour back to the PGA Tour turned out to be hardly a trickle. Does one even count as a trickle?

Brooks Koepka, a five-time major champion who is one of a handful of big names who took the Saudi Arabian money and fled the PGA Tour a couple of years ago, had buyer's remorse in December and announced to the world he was leaving LIV.

Paul Simon wrote in the 1970s that there are 50 ways to leave your lover, but would there be a few more ways for the LIVers to leave the LIV? The PGA Tour brass wanted to find out, so they hastily established what they called the "Returning Member Program" which specifically targeted the cream of the LIV crop — Koepka, Bryson DeChambeau, Jon Rahm and Cam Smith. Criteria set out by the PGA said the program was open only to major champions or Players' champs who won their titles between the years of 2022 and 2025. Those four aforementioned players all fit the criteria while everyone else — Phil Mickelson, Dustin Johnson, Patrick Reed, Sergio Garcia and others — didn't fit the qualifying terms, nor did they have the star power sought by the PGA Tour. They therefore didn't qualify for return to the bright lights of what is indisputably the best pro tour in the world.

Given a deadline of Feb. 2 to accept the PGA Tour's offer, DeChambeau, Rahm and Smith all immediately pledged their fealty to LIV and left Koepka as the lone returnee. SI.com said Smith was committed to his all-Australian team on LIV while Rahm's contract with the breakaway tour runs through 2027. DeChambeau is a superstar in the YouTube golf world and has earning power from that source potentially greater than what he could accumulate playing on regular tours.

New PGA Tour commissioner Brian Rolapp said there was no guarantee the Tour would leave the return window open forever. "Once the door closes, there is no promise that this path will be available again," said Rolapp.

Koepka's return to the PGA Tour didn't come without some financial pain. He will have to make a $5 million charitable donation; he won't be eligible for the 2026 Fed-Ex Cup $100 million bonus program; he will not be able to play in the Tour's big-money signature events in 2026; and he will not be able to earn any money from the Player Equity Program for five years. That last condition could reportedly be worth up to $80 million.

"The penalty is significant, but I understand why they've done it. It hurts but it's supposed to," Koepka told Golfweek. "I've got a lot of work to do with the players and I want to do that one-on-one. I want to have those conversations, but behind closed doors."

Initial reports said the majority of PGA Tour players are glad to have Koepka back but while LIV will survive, it's more irrelevant than ever without Koepka.

• Cathal Kelly of the Globe and Mail, on Brooks Koepka's return to the PGA Tour: "You almost feel sorry for the Saudis. They made Koepka monstrously rich, and in return he shanked them. But when you pay mercenary money, you get mercenaries."

- Comedy guy Torben Rolfsen of Vancouver: "Senators' captain Brady Tkachuk says he's giving up fighting after undergoing thumb surgery. Oh well, he'll always have his stick."
- Snipped from Jack Finarelli's sportscurmudgeon.com: "Jake Gaither, longtime head coach at Florida A and M, on his ideal defensive player: 'He should be agile, mobile and hostile.'"
- David Aldridge of The Athletic, on AI challenges facing sports journalism: "You don't get rich being a reporter, but you can make a decent buck. In contrast, ChatGPT can write a decent paragraph or two, for free, and never complains about having to fly Southwest to get to Cleveland."
- Columnist Norman Chad: "Enough with Joey Chestnut. Now he's going for the world bagel eating championship. He's just stuffing wieners and bagels down his throat while the world burns."
- Steve Simmons of the Toronto Sun, about Flames' Jonathan Huberdeau, who had 21 points in 45 games with the Flames through Jan. 24: "Hard to believe, but just four years ago, Huberdeau had 115 points in a season. Honest."
- Steve Simmons again: "Without Bo Bichette, the Blue Jays still need one solid bat, one starting pitcher, one high-leverage relief pitcher and more affordable tickets."
- Headline at theonion.com: "Groundskeeper Unsure What To Do With Unconscious Player Left In Medical Tent"
- From Fox 29 in Philadelphia: "Flyers' mascot Gritty paid $250,000 per year, only $3,000 less than the Pennsylvania governor."
- Another one from Torben Rolfsen: "TV networks are courting former Steelers coach Mike Tomlin. Fox would like him for their NFL studio show while NBC is considering him for a reboot of Different Strokes."

Bingo night boosts programs at Elizabeth Middle School

BY JOAN JANZEN

A full house filled Elizabeth Middle School on Thursday evening, Jan. 29, as families gathered for the school's annual Family Bingo night.

Now in its third year, the student-led event featured bingo games, a cake auction and a raffle, all made possible through the generosity of local businesses and community members who donated prizes. Raffle tickets were quickly snapped up as participants settled in for the evening.

Among the first to arrive was Lillian Soderholm, who had her bingo cards laid out and ready well before the first game. "When does the bingo start?" she asked eagerly as the gym continued to fill with families.

One of the highlights of the evening was the Grade 8 cake auction, which showcased an array of themed creations made by students with help from their parents. Cakes ranged in design and flavour, including a colourful Cookie Monster cake that drew plenty of attention from bidders. Proceeds from the auction will help fund the Grade 8 class's overnight camping trip later this year.

Funds raised through bingo ticket sales will support school trips, upgrades to the food lab, the school meal program and other student initiatives, making the evening both entertaining and impactful for the entire school community.

TO THE EDITOR:

Dear Editor.

This letter is now in the hands of all Members of our federal Parliament.

Poking around the internet looking for that illusive and sacred truth has become a time-consuming exercise in futility.

Social media and talk-show hosts have become very popular while our WOKE politicians and a confused judiciary are fully engaged fragmenting and re-defining our country.

Carney's new world order is slowly coming into focus. As a long-time banker he knows money, but policy and direction is still in a dense fog. Arbitrarily awarding a bunch of non-Indigenous people VETO powers over land use and resource development is simply incomprehensible.

Land ownership should be on top of the page. Ownership must be 'cut in stone', as it is the very foundation, we absolutely MUST HAVE to stabilize our already fragile financial, socio-economic, and political environments.

Today the doors are wide-open for big multi-national corporations to scoop our precious and overpriced housing properties, making home ownership for Canadian middle-class workers completely out of reach.

Huge global corporations have been busy buying our land and housing properties, while Trudeau was busy transforming Canada into a world class refugee camp.

Economic immigrants we desperately needed to grow our economy are leaving through our back doors. About 1.25 million TFWs are taking their jobs, and more than half-a-million people are collecting EI.

Total aggregate federal and provincial overspending for 2025 – 2026 alone is projected to be in excess of 113 billion dollars, while about 80% of so-called Indigenous residents still rely on social assistance. The Chiefs are getting the bulk of our resource royalties we need to build municipal, provincial, and federal infrastructure.

Our colonial political system has left the doors wide open for radical changes in ownership of our land, and the destruction of our working middle class. Without the land, and the people to work it, we are truly screwed. We will all be tenants. We are well on our way.

A Proportional ballot is the only 'weapon' that completely destroys that incredible lock our Premier David Eby has on the BC Legislature.

Adopting, implementing, and using a Proportional ballot to pass legislation will require the support of at least 50% of all eligible voters, not 5%, and nobody will have VETO powers.

Without that ballot we can kiss Canada as we know it good bye, and follow the US and the UK down that ugly colonial political sewer. The Eby's and the Carneys of the world do not want to perform their electoral mandate to govern, they want to Rule, and Carney wants a mandate to bury that truth we so desperately need to have closure on reconciliation.

Biggar's Garrett Hawkins closing in on Major Leagues

BY KATE WINQUIST

From a small west-central Saskatchewan community better known for grain elevators than radar guns, Garrett Hawkins is steadily pitching his way toward baseball's biggest stage.

The 6-foot-5 right-hander from Biggar has emerged as one of the San Diego Padres' top pitching prospects, capping a remarkable comeback season in 2025 that earned him a spot on the club's 40-man Major League roster and put him firmly on the radar for a future big-league call-up.

Drafted by San Diego in the ninth round of the 2021 MLB Draft, Hawkins has taken a long and winding road to this point — one that included leaving the province to chase elite competition, battling serious injury, and proving he belongs among the game's rising arms.

After developing at the Vauxhall Academy of Baseball in Alberta and pitching collegiately at the University of British Columbia, Hawkins entered professional baseball with promise but faced a major setback in 2023 when an arm injury led to Tommy John surgery, sidelining him for most of two seasons.

When he returned to the mound in 2025, the results were emphatic.

Used primarily out of the bullpen, Hawkins dominated at both High-A Fort Wayne and Double-A San Antonio, posting a 1.50 earned-run average over 60 innings, striking out 80 batters and allowing very little solid contact. At one point, he rattled off a scoreless streak approaching 40 consecutive innings, one of the longest in the minor leagues last season.

The Padres took notice.

In November, the organization added Hawkins to its 40-man roster, protecting him from the Rule 5 draft and signaling confidence that the Saskatchewan product could soon contribute at the major-league level.

Armed with a fastball that has touched 98 miles per hour and a sharp breaking pitch, Hawkins has transitioned seamlessly from starter to power reliever — a role increasingly valued in today's game. The Padres recognized that progress by naming him their Minor League Pitcher of the Year.

For Biggar and the surrounding west-central Saskatchewan region, Hawkins' ascent is a source of pride. Saskatchewan has produced only a handful of Major League players, and Hawkins is now within striking distance of becoming the next.

While his journey has taken him thousands of kilometres from home, those roots remain central to his story — proof that elite talent can emerge from even the smallest prairie towns.

As spring training approaches, Hawkins will arrive with a legitimate chance to push for his Major League debut, carrying with him not just Padres expectations, but the hopes of a hometown that has been following every inning.

HOCKEY NEWS

SWHL, CRHL release award winners

BY PHIL HEILMAN

Friday was a busy day for both the Sask West Hockey League and the Cross Roads Hockey Leagues as they both revealed award winners

Sask West

1st Team All-Stars: Goal – Logan Drackett (Kindersley), Defense – Daniel Hilsendager and Derek Keller (Wilkie), Forwards – Rick Cey (Wilkie), Jonathon Redlick (Biggar) and Jaxon Georget (Kindersley).

2nd Team All Stars: Goal – Taryn Kotchorek (Edam), Defense – Carson Grolla (Kindersley) and Tyler Baier (Macklin), Forwards – Keegan Tiringer (Edam), Shayne Neigum (Kindersley), Linden McCorrister (Asquith).

Top Scorer was earned by Jaxon Georget (18G, 27A for 45 PTS in 15 games), while the Coach of the Year was given to Les Aylward and Gary McManus of the Kindersley Klippers.

Rookie of the Year was handed out to Rhett Partington of the Macklin Mohawks, who had 4 goals and 6 assists, good for 10 points in 15 games played.

Both the Best Defensive Forward and Most Gentlemanly Player awards were given to Ryne Keller of the Wilkie Outlaws, while brother Derek won the Top Defenseman and League MVP awards.

The Harvey Somerville Memorial Award was handed to Jerome Ehry. The Somerville award is a prestigious award given to an individual to recognize their years of service in both hockey in their town and the Sask West Hockey League. It was created in 2006 to commemorate the work of Harvey, who was a longtime supporter of the Eatonia Huskies and the Sask West Hockey League.

The Bill Cey Memorial Award was given to Tyler Baier of the Macklin Mohawks. The Cey award is another prestigious award given to a hometown player who exemplifies work ethics in both on and off ice activities in their communities. This award was created in 2023 to honour Bill, who was a very avid supporter of the Wilkie Outlaws.

Cross Roads

Top Scorer honours went to Jordan Johnston of the Rosetown Redwings (17G, 15A for 32 PTS in 10 games), while Coach of the Year went to Curtis McLean of the Unity Miners.

Best Defensive Forward award was won by Jon MacDonald of the Dodsland Stars. Most Gentlemanly award was given to Troy Joyce, also of the Dodsland Stars.

Noah Gumpinger of the Unity Miners took home the Rookie of the Year. He went 4-1 in 5 GP, sporting a 2.20 GAA and 0.904 Save %.

The Redwings took the rest of the awards, with Best Goalie being awarded to Noah Martens, Best Defenseman given to Eric Robbie, and Jordan Johnston taking home League MVP.

SaskPower launches review of large nuclear reactor option

SaskPower and the Saskatchewan government say they have begun a formal process to evaluate large nuclear reactor technologies as part of the province's long-term electricity planning.

The review will run alongside SaskPower's existing work on small modular reactors, or SMRs, as Saskatchewan looks to expand its supply of non-emitting power and meet growing demand in the coming decades.

Jeremy Harrison said the province's Energy Security Strategy includes both SMRs and large-scale nuclear generation, using uranium produced in Saskatchewan.

Harrison said nuclear power, combined with expanded interprovincial transmission capacity, would help strengthen Saskatchewan's energy security and position the province as a power exporter.

Nuclear generation has been used in Canada for more than 60 years and provides a reliable source of electricity without greenhouse-gas emissions.

Jeremy Harrison

SaskPower president and chief executive Rupen Pandya said the utility will work with experienced nuclear operators and continue engagement with Indigenous rightsholders, communities and businesses as it assesses the potential for large reactors in the province.

Pandya said bringing a large reactor into service would likely take 15 to 20 years, making early planning essential.

Before any construction could proceed, SaskPower would need to complete extensive regulatory reviews, site selection and public engagement.

SaskPower's SMR project is continuing separately. The utility expects to identify a site for Saskatchewan's first small modular reactor near Estevan later this year.

Saskatchewan promotes mining, energy investment on western Canada tour

Saskatchewan's energy and resources minister is promoting the province as a top destination for mining and energy investment during a multi-day visit to British Columbia and Alberta focused on export access, infrastructure and interprovincial cooperation.

Chris Beaudry said the trip is aimed at supporting growth in Saskatchewan's resource sectors by strengthening connections to markets and working with other jurisdictions to improve shared infrastructure.

Beaudry attended the Western Mining Ministers Summit in Vancouver on Jan. 25, where ministers from western provinces and northern territories discussed economic corridors and access to export routes, including ports on the northwest coast, Hudson Bay and Grays Bay. The ministers signed a memorandum of understanding committing to reduce unnecessary delays for major natural resource projects as part of efforts toward a Western Canadian Critical Minerals Strategy.

Saskatchewan is Canada's largest primary producer of critical minerals, including potash and uranium, and the province has been positioning itself as a key supplier for global supply chains.

On Jan. 26, Beaudry attended AME Roundup, a major mineral exploration conference in Vancouver, where he met with resource companies and toured a lithium processing facility operated by Saltworks Technologies Inc. Saltworks is working with EMP Metals Corp. on Project Aurora, a lithium refining demonstration plant planned for southeastern Saskatchewan. The project has received provincial support through the Critical Minerals Innovation Incentive.

The minister also visited the Port of Vancouver, one of the main export gateways for Saskatchewan commodities. Provincial officials say expanding port capacity is increasingly important as production grows across sectors such as potash, energy products and critical minerals.

Beaudry concluded the trip in Calgary on Jan. 28 with meetings focused on Saskatchewan's oil and gas industry and the province's target of increasing production to 600,000 barrels per day by 2030.

The government says it will continue working with industry to support investment and long-term competitiveness in the sector.

Volunteers sought for Denzil Recreation Board events

BY KATE WINQUIST

DENZIL — The Denzil Recreation Board is seeking community volunteers to help support upcoming events and activities.

Volunteers play a vital role in ensuring the success of local functions, and the board relies on their time and commitment to continue operating community events. Opportunities to volunteer also offer a chance to meet new people and learn more about the work the Recreation Board does in the community.

Upcoming events include bonspiels, tractor pulls, and the annual shrimp and steak fest. No prior experience is required—only a willingness to help and support community initiatives.

Those interested in being added to the volunteer list or learning more are encouraged to contact any board member or Flo Frenette at 306-753-8076. Every volunteer contribution is appreciated and helps make a difference in the community.

Who are Kindersley's Welcome Wagon Ambassadors?

BY JOAN JANZEN

The Welcome Wagon group has been visiting newcomers to Kindersley during the past year, and are waiting patiently for warmer weather when people begin to think about relocating. However this is the perfect opportunity to introduce the members of their team.

Kyla Janzen joined Welcome Wagon because she feels it's important to extend kindness and energy to people who make Kindersley their new home. She also spent time visiting businesses and telling them about Welcome Wagon, when it was introduced last fall.

"Most people already heard about it and were excited that it was back," she said. "People were more than willing to help promote it and contribute coupons and items to the welcome packages."

If you happen to hear of any people who have been brave enough to move during the cold winter months, be sure to contact Welcome Wagon at 306-500-1173.

RCMP report multiple incidents across Unity, Wilkie and Macklin

RCMP responded to a range of incidents across the communities of Unity, Wilkie and Macklin in recent days, including fraud complaints, traffic-related matters and requests for assistance.

In Unity, police are investigating a reported fraud and a hit-and-run incident that resulted in vehicle damage. Officers also received a complaint of a suspicious individual near a residence, but patrols were unable to locate the person described.

Police were asked to conduct a wellbeing check on a family member, though the request was later cancelled after the individual was located. During a storm, officers responded to a report of a vehicle in the ditch and transported the occupants to a local hotel for the night.

RCMP also attended a two-vehicle collision within the town. No injuries were reported and no charges were laid. A reported break and enter at a residence was determined to be unfounded, and police noted one false alarm during the reporting period.

During traffic enforcement, officers issued a 60-day roadside suspension. In a separate incident, police attempted a traffic stop, but the vehicle fled at a high rate of speed. Officers were unable to locate the vehicle, and its information was shared with neighbouring detachments.

In Wilkie, RCMP received a fraud complaint; however, there was insufficient evidence to proceed with the investigation. Officers also conducted

RCMP investigating break-ins

Saskatchewan RCMP are investigating a series of break and enters reported across several central Saskatchewan communities earlier this month.

Between Jan. 5 and Jan. 8, 2026, RCMP responded to multiple reports of break-ins within the Craik, Biggar and Unity detachment areas. Investigators determined that several businesses and community centres in Davidson, Perdue, Biggar and Unity were targeted over the four-day period.

Police say forced entry caused damage at multiple locations, and cash was reported stolen in several of the incidents.

RCMP are continuing to investigate and are working to determine whether some or all of the break-ins are connected. As part of the investigation, officers canvassed the areas around the affected locations for witnesses and surveillance footage.

Unity RCMP obtained video footage of a suspect believed to be male attempting to break into a building on 1st Avenue South in Unity at approximately 11:30 p.m. on Jan. 7. Police say the suspect was unsuccessful in gaining entry.

The individual was described as wearing a black hoodie, blue jeans, gloves and a face covering. Police noted the suspect has a distinctive walk, taking short strides and appearing to slightly favour his right foot.

Shortly after that incident, a photo believed to show the same suspect was captured during a break and enter at a community building on 7th Avenue East in Unity.

a wellbeing check at the request of a family member. CN Police reported a railway crossing malfunction in a rural area near Wilkie, which was noted for information purposes.

In Macklin, police are investigating a complaint of assault with a weapon. RCMP also responded to a Mental Health Act-related call and spoke with the individual involved.

Several investigations remain ongoing.

RCMP report multiple incidents, impaired driving charge

Rosetown/Kyle RCMP responded to a range of calls across west-central Saskatchewan between Jan. 23 and Jan. 29, including fraud complaints, break and enters and an impaired driving incident.

On Jan. 25, officers were called to a disturbance in Rosetown shortly after midnight. Police spoke with the parties involved and no further action was required. Later that day, RCMP received a report of a gas-and-dash at a Rosetown business.

Police received multiple fraud-related complaints on Jan. 26, including one in Fiske and another involving a fraudulent $100 bill in Elrose. Both matters remain under investigation. That afternoon, officers assisted the Combined Traffic Services Unit with a 60-day provincial driving suspension on Highway 7 near Fiske.

RCMP also investigated a report of suspicious persons in the RM of Lacadena, which remains ongoing, and responded to a disturbance at the Elrose Uniplex. No further action was required in that case.

Later that evening, officers were dispatched to an erratic driving complaint on Highway 7 near Zealandia. While en route, police were advised the vehicle had entered the ditch. Following an investigation, the driver was charged with impaired operation of a motor vehicle.

On Jan. 27, RCMP received a report of a break and enter at a Rosetown business. The investigation is ongoing. Police also responded to a trespassing complaint in Kyle, which was resolved without further action, and a report of vehicle vandalism in Rosetown that remains under investigation.

Early on Jan. 28, RCMP were notified by the Beechy Fire Department of a structure fire in the RM of Victory. Police attendance was not required. Later that morning, officers and EMS responded to a motor vehicle collision in the RM of Lacadena, where minor injuries were reported.

That afternoon, RCMP were dispatched to a possible break and enter at a residence in Rosetown. The investigation remains ongoing.

Between Jan. 23 and Jan. 29, Rosetown/Kyle RCMP issued 42 traffic-related charges and responded to two 911 misdial calls and one false alarm.

Police are asking anyone with information related to these or any other crimes to contact the Rosetown RCMP at 306-882-5700 or Saskatchewan Crime Stoppers anonymously at 1-800-222-TIPS (8477) or online at www.saskcrimestoppers.com.

TeleMiracle 50 adds four nationally recognized cast members

SASKATOON — TeleMiracle has announced four additional cast members for its historic 50th broadcast, adding nationally recognized broadcaster George Stroumboulopoulos, comedians Myles Morrison and Matt Donlevy, and CTV Regina weather and community anchor Sabeen Ahmad.

TeleMiracle 50 will run for an expanded 22 hours, beginning at 7 p.m. on Feb. 28 and concluding at 5 p.m. on March 1, 2026. The anniversary broadcast will take place at Prairieland Park in Saskatoon.

TeleMiracle is an annual telethon in support of the Kinsmen Foundation, which provides medical travel assistance and mobility and special needs equipment to Saskatchewan residents. Over its history, TeleMiracle has raised more than $171 million for people across the province.

Previously announced cast members include legacy performers Beverley Mahood, Brad Johner, Jeffery Straker and the TeleMiracle House Band, as well as TSN host Kate Beirness, radio personality Clayton Kroeker, country artist Jojo Mason, and actor and producer Sera-Lys McArthur.

The Backstage Lounge cast features disability advocate and past Kinsmen Foundation recipient Shailynn Taylor and podcast host Gary Nickel. The broadcast will also include special appearances by Brock Andrews, Brodie Siebert, Jay Semko and Danica Lorer, Munroe & Patrick, Northern Air and The Steadies, along with performances from 70 Saskatchewan-based talents.

"Our cast and performers make the show what it is, and we are so fortunate to host an event that raises funds for people in need across Saskatchewan," said TeleMiracle 50 chair Tammy Blackwell. "We're grateful to present an entertaining show year after year that truly makes a difference."

Donations to TeleMiracle can be made year-round through the Kinsmen Foundation, including through Helping Hands campaigns, Saskatchewan Talent fundraising pages and local Kin, Kinettes and Kinsmen clubs. Donations can also be made during the telethon weekend or online at telemiracle.com.

TeleMiracle enters its 50th year in 2026, continuing its mission of helping Saskatchewan residents improve their quality of life and independence.

5 reasons to work in the community sector

Working in the community sector can be motivating and rewarding. Community organizations offer many advantages. Here are five good reasons to consider a career in this field.

1. Real impact. When you work for a community organization, you directly support your neighbours and coworkers. You support worthy causes and participate in projects that promote fairness and improve the quality of life for everyone.

2. Strong values. Community organizations operate on social values, such as solidarity, equality and respect. Every day, you'll work alongside passionate people who truly want to make a difference.

3. Openness to ideas. Unlike more hierarchical workplaces, community organizations are often environments where you can suggest new ideas and play a part in shaping how things are done. All ideas are welcome!

4. Continuous learning. Community sector roles often allow you to wear many hats. There's always something new for you to learn, and you're also constantly growing your capabilities and learning new skills.

5. Teamwork. Teamwork and mutual support drive non-profit organizations. You'll work closely with colleagues, volunteers, clients and partners. People who get involved in local organizations often form strong, lasting connections.

In short, no matter the position you hold, whether in communications, administration, maintenance, food services or accounting, community work gives meaning to your life.

Are you looking for meaningful work? Explore job openings with organizations in your area today.

Key benefits

Whether it's a permanent position or a student job, the role of warehouse clerk offers several advantages. The position helps you build valuable skills and keep in shape while working in a fast-paced environment.

Duties and responsibilities

Warehouse clerks perform a variety of tasks and have a range of responsibilities, including:

- Receiving and inspecting goods
- Organizing and storing products

- Preparing and shipping orders
- Maintaining inventory records
- Supervising other workers
- Keeping the warehouse clean and safe

Required skills

If you want to be a warehouse clerk, you must be organized, able to lift heavy loads and skilled with basic computer tools. In addition, you must have strong communication skills and a high school diploma or equivalency.

Robots won't replace warehouse clerks anytime soon. Many essential tasks still depend on human workers.

If you enjoy active, hands-on work, this stimulating job is an excellent option. It's up to you!

You can change careers at any age

Are people telling you that you're too old to switch careers or go back to school? Don't listen to them! Changing careers is a personal journey and can certainly be beneficial. Here are some things to consider.

Ask yourself some questions: If you're thinking about changing careers, forget about your age. Instead, ask yourself questions like:

- Do I have enough support from my loved ones to start over?
- How can I balance my studies and my family life?
- Do I already have the skills I need to start a new job?
- How long would this transition take? In other words, is the time frame realistic?

Whether you're 35 or 50, a clear, thoughtful evaluation of your situation will help you make the best decision. For guidance and support, reach out to a career counselling service in your area.

What to say when a recruiter asks you where you see yourself in five years?

You may have been asked the question "Where do you see yourself in five years?" at a recent job interview. This question can sometimes be difficult to answer, even for experienced candidates. No one can really predict where they'll be in five years. So, what should you say? Here are a few ideas to consider.

Be authentic: When a potential employer asks you this classic question, they don't necessarily expect you to answer with "I see myself in senior management" or "I see myself as the head of business development." It's essentially a way to confirm that your profile matches the job offer.

Take the time to think about how you would answer this question before the interview. Do you want this job because it provides a better work-life balance? Do you think your skills will contribute to the team's success or expand the company's customer base? Be authentic. The most important thing is to show your interviewer that you see yourself as part of the company.

Talk about advancement: If you want to avoid giving too much personal information—your plans to move abroad, for example—focus on goals that align with the job's specifications. You might consider mentioning your interest in developing certain technical skills or earning certifications. It's entirely appropriate to include this type of information in your conversation.

If you prepare for the interview and provide answers that reflect who you are, you'll undoubtedly present yourself confidently and position yourself in a positive light. Put on your best smile and trust yourself!

If you need professional guidance, consult a human resources professional in your area.

Physical work in the great outdoors: have you considered landscaping?

Do you have a green thumb and enjoy working in the great outdoors? Landscaping could be the perfect job for you. Here's a look at this vital career.

Tasks: Landscapers design, create and maintain green spaces for their clients, planting flowers, trees and shrubs. They may also install features such as fences, garden walls, fountains and other decorative elements. They beautify outdoor areas for homeowners, restaurant owners, public organizations, golf clubs and more. As a landscaper, you might be self-employed or work for a landscaping company.

Skills: Landscapers must be in good shape. The work is physically demanding and requires a high level of dexterity. A strong eye for esthetics is also required to create balanced and appealing designs. Additionally, because the landscaper must work closely with their customers, excellent communication skills are essential.

Advantages: With professional training, landscapers can work for companies or start their own businesses. In addition to being a lucrative profession, landscaping gives you opportunities to improve outdoor spaces by making them more beautiful and resilient. The work you do as a landscaper can also contribute to environmental improvements, such as reducing urban heat islands.

COUNCIL NEWS

Mayor, council set priorities for 2026

BY JOAN JANZEN

Kindersley Mayor Ken Francis and town council are looking ahead to a busy 2026, with a focus on keeping taxes low while maintaining service levels and ensuring residents continue to have access to affordable recreational facilities.

Francis said council remains committed to long-term infrastructure planning, including annual water and sewer replacements and street paving.

"We have an infrastructure plan in place where we do water and sewer replacements every year, as well as street paving," he said. "The project on Main Street will be completed this summer with a paving cap that finishes off the work started last year."

One unexpected expense emerged following an inspection of the town's water tower, which revealed significant interior issues.

"We need to spend approximately $1 million to repair and re-coat the interior lining this spring," Francis said. "It was an unforeseen cost, but we caught it before it became a much bigger and more expensive fix."

Council is also reviewing Kindersley's water rate structure in an effort to build reserves for future investments in water infrastructure.

"This includes evening out the town and rural water rates so they are consistent and fair," Francis said, adding that the town continues to prioritize efficiency in operations and tendering processes to ensure value for taxpayers.

Another major priority for 2026 is moving forward with a replacement community hall. Plans to renovate the Elks Hall were abandoned after costs proved higher than anticipated.

"Plans are in the works for a new build at a new location, with double the capacity and double the parking," Francis said. "That way, larger events can be held here."

While venues such as the Norman Ritchie Centre, Kindersley Ballroom, Legion Hall and several churches can accommodate smaller gatherings, Francis said the town needs a space capable of hosting events for more than 500 people.

Inflation remains a key challenge for both municipal operations and new construction projects, particularly as council works to avoid increasing property taxes.

"Last year was a reassessment year, so it was a challenge to reshuffle the tax base," Francis said. "We saw a significant drop in hotel and multi-unit properties, so other classes had to be adjusted to balance revenue. To be honest, hotels were paying too much, so a reduction was appropriate."

Francis said there are indications that new businesses may be opening in the local mall, though no formal announcements have been made.

Service clubs also continue to play an important role in the community, he added.

"I feel there's an uptick in service clubs, which help support local businesses through the events they put on," he said.

Francis said serving on council is both rewarding and impactful, noting that decisions often produce visible results in a short time.

"I hope we see interest in the council position opening up in March," he said. "Being on council is a great way to be involved and to give back to your community."

BOOK REVIEW

“The Lavender Child”

by Harriet Richards

Published by Shadowpaw Press Reprise

REVIEW BY TOBY A. WELCH

The Lavender Child is a beautifully unique and creative story with unforgettable characters and a plot that keeps readers intrigued. I wasn't surprised to learn that this powerful read was a winner of the Saskatchewan Book Awards First Book prize when it was initially published.

If you are like me and wonder what the title is referencing - what the heck is a lavender child? - I have the answer! When one of the main characters is born, Dion, he is limp and looks close to death. Another child was born into the family decades earlier that only lived for two weeks and fought for every breath. Both babies were a shade of blue, hence "lavender child." (I should mention that this book might be a bit challenging for people who have lost babies or experienced children with health issues.)

I loved that when reading this story about three generations of a family that we are thrown back into a time when life wasn't so chaotic and technologically driven. But it's not so far back that this would be considered historical fiction. After all, the book mentions Dairy Queen, John Candy, and Wheel of Fortune. It's a great reminder of a simpler time.

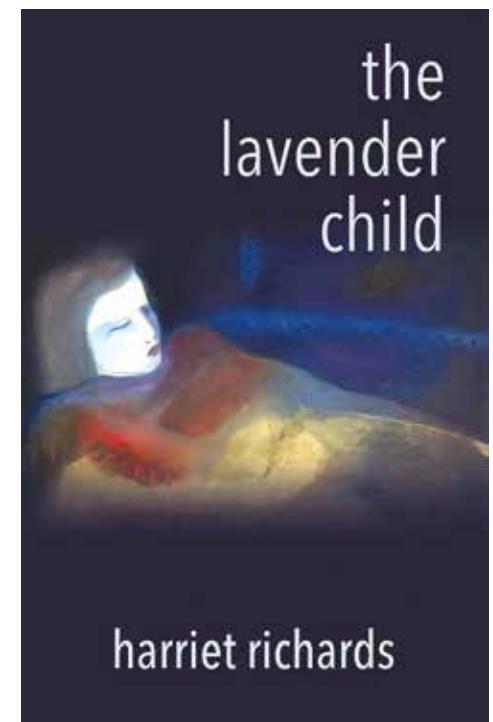

There are so many pluses to this novel. The chronological layout is seamless in the best way. Chapter one takes place in September and chapter two takes place in October. This continues throughout the book with each chapter being one month. It ends with chapter thirteen, which is September of the year after the first chapter. It flows smoothly. Another bonus is the perfectly balanced amount of dialogue mixed with descriptions mixed with scenes that carry the plot strategically forward.

The Lavender Child was first published in 1998 by Thistledown Press.

Myself and anyone else who picks up a new copy will be thrilled that Regina-based Shadowpaw Press Reprise dusted it off and published the second edition in 2024. It's heartbreaking to think that it may not have been given a second life if Shadowpaw Press didn't see the value in this entertaining read.

Saskatoon-based Richards has published three book-length works of fiction and all three have been either finalists or award winners. Having read The Lavender Child, that was not surprising to learn. Additionally, Richards has published short fiction in literary journals in Canada and Wales. Richards is also a painter and her work has graced book covers. I hope she puts down her paintbrush soon to create another beautiful piece of literature.

For book lovers searching for a story that is somber and uplifting at the same time, The Lavender Child should be the next book you read. Picking up a copy should be on the top of your to-do list!

This book is available at your local book store or from www.Skbooks.Com

9.1 million illicit cigarettes seized after Highway 16 traffic stop

RM of Battle River — Saskatchewan RCMP have charged an Ontario man after seizing approximately 9.1 million illicit cigarettes during a traffic stop west of North Battleford earlier this month.

The seizure followed a stop by Saskatchewan Highway Patrol officers on Highway 16 in the Rural Municipality of Battle River at about 12:40 a.m. on Jan. 20. Officers stopped a truck and trailer and discovered a large quantity of illicit tobacco in the trailer. The adult male driver was arrested at the scene.

Battlefords RCMP, along with the Saskatchewan RCMP's Yorkton Saskatchewan Trafficking Response Team, were brought in to continue the investigation. A search of the truck and trailer revealed 23 pallets of unstamped tobacco, containing an estimated 9.1 million cigarettes. The tobacco was seized and the driver was taken into RCMP custody.

Police say the investigation determined the driver was on court-ordered release conditions related to tobacco-related charges laid in Ontario, including a condition prohibiting him from being outside that province.

As a result of the investigation, 41-year-old Harwinder Kahlon of Brampton, Ont., has been charged with one count of selling, offering for sale, transporting or possessing unstamped tobacco for the purpose of sale under the Criminal Code; one count of possession of unstamped tobacco under the Excise Act; one count of possessing, storing, transporting or selling tobacco not marked in a prescribed manner under Saskatchewan's Tobacco Tax Act; and one count of failing to comply with an undertaking condition under the Criminal Code.

Kahlon appeared in North Battleford provincial court on Jan. 21.

AAFC cuts – eating the goose that lays the golden eggs

The Agricultural Producers Association of Saskatchewan (APAS) is raising serious concern over Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada's (AAFC) decision to close seven research sites, including key facilities in Saskatchewan located at Scott and Indian Head, and eliminate 665 positions across Canada.

These closures eliminate critical public research infrastructure that has been foundational for Canadian farmers' competitiveness for decades and contradict AAFC's stated mission to "drive innovation" and "create conditions for long-term profitability." This critical public research infrastructure embodies a public good that delivers widespread benefits to the public.

"To claim these cuts are aligned with a 'core mandate' of innovation misleads the agricultural sector," said APAS President Bill Prybylski. "Closing these sites is the opposite of progress. You cannot claim global leadership in sustainable agriculture while bulldozing the very farms and labs required for discovery and adaptation. It's like eating the goose that lays the golden eggs—sacrificing a steady, long-term benefit for a single, short-term gain."

The impacted prairie facilities include research farms at Scott and Indian Head in Saskatchewan, which provide producers with essential agronomic data tailored to local growing conditions. Additionally, the Lacombe Research and Development Centre in Alberta, a leading hub for forage and meat science, and the facility at Portage la Prairie, Manitoba, are also affected.

"The federal government is trading long-term benefits for a short-term rounding error in budget savings," Prybylski cautioned. "You cannot be a world leader in sustainable agriculture while eliminating the research needed for sustainability and adaptation. This will create an innovation vacuum that the private sector isn't stepping in to fill. By the time producers feel the full impact of these decisions, it will be too late to reverse the damage."

APAS is especially troubled by the timing of these cuts. The Sustainable Canadian Agricultural Partnership (SCAP) places significant emphasis on adaptation and resiliency as core objectives, yet these closures directly undermine those goals. Farmers are being asked to adopt climate-smart practices that require targeted research support—research that will no longer exist if these facilities are shut down.

In response, APAS is urging the federal government and the Minister of Agriculture and Agri-Food to release an immediate impact assessment outlining how it plans to achieve its innovation and adaptation goals considering these widespread closures. Producers deserve transparency about how these research reductions will affect them—and answers about how the government intends to safeguard the long-term growth of Canadian agriculture.

REMEMBERING WHEN

Nothing dates you faster than your music

When I was visiting my family over the Christmas holidays, we were watching Wheel of Fortune at my brother's house one evening, and the Triple Toss-Up that night featured three Heaven-themed word puzzles.

Being of a certain generation, the answer to the third puzzle was obvious to me even before the letters started revealing themselves. It was the Led Zeppelin song "Stairway to Heaven."

But when the first contestant rang in to solve the puzzle, the answer he gave flabbergasted both my brother and me. He confidently announced: "Staircase to Heaven."

"Staircase to Heaven"??

When my brother and I finally stopped laughing, we both agreed that host Ryan Seacrest should have it written into his contract that he has the right to swat at least one contestant per season in the back of the head for giving a particularly dumb answer. I mean, "Staircase to Heaven"! Come on!

But that being said, the contestant who gave the answer appeared to be in his early-to-mid thirties, and the odds may have been quite high that he had never even heard of the song in question. Stairway to Heaven was practically an anthem for much of my generation, but popular music tends to fade away as new tastes and trends rise with each succeeding wave of young listeners.

Nothing dates you faster than your music. And nothing changes faster than today's music scene. Today's hits quickly become tomorrow's oldies, and yesterday's music superstars quickly become today's nobodies. They go from playing sold-out mega-stadiums at their peak to playing small and mid-sized casino halls in the present, performing for people of their own generation who are trying to forget about the headaches of daily life and briefly relive the glory days of their youth. No more mortgages, bills, or ungrateful kids — at least for those couple of hours — as the mature audience is whisked back to the days when they were young and free, full of dreams, and had no responsibilities whatsoever. They still had a "future so bright, they had to wear shades," as the song goes.

Musical tastes and trends change with every generation. In one particular episode of The Simpsons, Homer tries to bond with Bart and Lisa and their friends while driving them to school by telling them about all the musical groups he followed in his youth, but the kids have no interest in learning about Homer's "dinosaur bands," as Bart put it. Homer later takes Bart and Lisa to a music festival in Capitol City featuring all the kids' favourite bands, but as soon as they arrive at the festival, Bart and Lisa quickly decide to distance themselves from him — both physically and musically — no matter how cool he tries to act. They ditch him as soon as they can. Each generation must find a way to push away from the previous one musically, no matter how crass or disturbing the new type of music may seem.

When I was in my teens in the 1970s and just beginning to explore my newly discovered musical genre of rock and roll, I picked up an 8-track tape of classic '50s rock out of the bargain bin at our local department store. Curious, I took it home, went into my bedroom, and popped it into my 8-track player — that being the coolest way to listen to music at the time.

One song in particular struck me as pretty cool — until my mother popped her head into my room with a big smile and told me it had been one of her favourite songs when she was a teenager. And, of course, once your mom tells you something like that, the song immediately goes from pretty cool to pretty uncool!

But it could be worse. One Christmas not so long ago, when our entire family was at my brother's house, my then-high-school-aged nephew asked me what my all-time favourite song was during an inter-generational music discussion. When I told him it was a song by Simon and Garfunkel, he replied, "Oh, we studied them in history class. That's hippie music!"

Sigh. Thanks, nephew. You made my day.

I keep thinking about a Facebook post I recently read that said, "My grocery store used to play old people music. Now they play all my favourites!" Kind of sums it up, doesn't it? Thirty years from now, the cycle will repeat itself. The kids will be the old people, and the grocery stores will be rocking to all the oldies tunes of current stars like Beyoncé, Taylor Swift, Drake, The Weeknd, Bruno Mars, Adele, and Justin Bieber. And God only knows who — or what — their kids will be listening to.

In the end, every generation thinks its music is the soundtrack of the world — and in a way, I suppose it is. The names change, the beats change, the hairstyles definitely change, but the cycle never does. We all grow up, we all grow older, and eventually our favourite songs will all end up in our local grocery store or in the next generation's history class at school.

Like sixties troubadour Bob Dylan once sang, "The times, they are a-changin'."

And musically, they always will.

Two determined young, single women homesteaded near Kindersley

BY JOAN JANZEN

Homesteaders crowded around the Saskatoon land office in the early 1900s, waiting to claim land, but the majority of those pioneers were men. It was difficult for women to claim a free homestead. To do so, they had to undergo a lengthy process to prove they were married, widowed, or had dependent children.

Around 1910, single women were permitted to homestead land if they could afford to purchase South African scrip (SAS). Instead of purchasing land outright, they bought scrip that allowed them to homestead 320 acres. However, they did not initially own the land. They had to abide by strict rules and regulations in order to "prove up" their claims under the watchful eyes of land agents and inspectors.

According to Saskatchewan Archives Board (SAB) data, of the 4,730 SAS entries, only 11 percent were women. Here, we look at two of those determined single women who homesteaded land near Kindersley.

Mildred Williams was a teacher who made headlines across North America in May 1910 for her determination. Arriving from Minnesota, Williams supported her widowed mother but did not qualify for a

OBITUARIES

Richard Halter

November 2, 1947 - January 28, 2026

It is with heavy hearts that the Family announce the passing of Richard Halter. He passed away peacefully on Wednesday, January 28, 2026, at the age of 78 years. Richard leaves to cherish his memory: his children, Donelda (Luc) Proteau; Rick (Rhonda) Halter; Daphne Halter; and Megan (Brad) Ausmus; 10 grandchildren and 4 great-grandchildren. Jeffrey Proteau- Callie, Parker; Jasmin Proteau; Alysha (Trevor) Decker- Eli; Beck (Sara) Halter; Cori (Dillon) Rees- Sawyer; Gavin (Megan) Halter- expecting February, 2026 ; Jada Spence; Quinn, Ashlyn, and Kaden Ausmus. Richard is also survived by his former wife and mother of his children, Aileen Halter; brothers, Leonard (Elsie) Halter, Brent (Ernie) Halter, and sister-in-law; Sharon Halter as well as numerous nieces and nephews. Richard was predeceased by his parents, Joseph and Ruth Halter and his brother, Larry Halter.

Richard was born on November 2, 1947 in Dodsland, Sk. He grew up working on the family farm with his parents and his 3 brothers. After a short stay in Edmonton, Ab, where he trained in Welding, he eventually came back to the Dodsland area. He then built a home, south of Dodsland and continued farming, while also working at Be-line Manufacturing in Kindersley, Sk. He often worked hard and long hours, until his retirement in 2013. After retirement from farming, he moved to Kindersley, Sk, where he started BackRoads Plastic Welding, "Don't Falter, Call Halter!" That kept him working until his passing. You would often see him for coffee in the mornings and afternoons, and travelling around watching his grandchildren play hockey. If he wasn't at the rink watching hockey, he would likely have a hockey game on the T.V. his favourite team being the New York Rangers.

Richard was a father, grandfather, great-grandfather, brother, uncle and friend. He was consistent, hardworking, determined, caring, and loyal to his family and friends. He was dearly loved and will be greatly missed.

Funeral Celebration will be held at Our Lady of Grace Catholic Church in Dodsland, Sk on Thursday, February 12, 2026 at 2:00 pm. Interment at Dodsland Cemetery immediately following the service. Following the Interment, everyone is encouraged to stay and share in a time of fellowship with the family in the Our Lady of Grace Catholic Church Hall.

In lieu of flowers, the family kindly requests donations be made to the Dodsland Arena Rebuild Committee in memory of our dad, Richard Halter.

Our Family Chain

We little knew that morning
That God would call your name.
In life we loved you dearly;
In death we do the same.
It broke our hearts to lose you,
But you did not go alone,
For part of us went with you
The day God called you home.
You left us beautiful memories,
Your love is still our guide,
And although we cannot see you,
You are always by our side.
Our family chain is broken
And nothing seems the same,
But as God calls us one by one,
The chain will link again.

free homestead because she had no dependent children.

After arriving in Canada, she worked as a teacher in Saskatoon. She was single, in her early 20s, and highly determined. That determination resulted in Williams waiting for twelve days and nights at the top of the stairs of the Saskatoon land office in order to file on 320 acres of land near Kindersley. The land was valued at between $18 and $20 an acre. It had previously belonged to a North-West Mounted Policeman who had received a land grant as an incentive to move west, but after serving in the Yukon, he returned to South Africa.

Mildred carefully planned her twelve-day vigil at the land office. She hired one woman to bring her meals and drinks, and another to act as a messenger. She rested in a reclining chair and even fashioned a tent above her at night.

There were reports of a man attempting to push her off her chair, at which point others came to her rescue. When she finally filed her claim, she was met with applause and cheers from waiting friends.

Williams successfully proved up the land and became an official landowner. However, she may have later sold the property, as the Star Phoenix reported that she resigned from her teaching position in 1917 and moved to the Pacific coast.

Another single woman who purchased South African scrip near Kindersley was Marie Westphal. In 1910, Westphal arrived from Milwaukee to the Eatonia area to keep house for her brother Herman, who was homesteading.

Marie filed on land that had previously been abandoned by one of her brothers, who had been unable to take up residence on it. Her father also homesteaded nearby. She later married and settled in the district, where the Westphal family accumulated additional land in the Kindersley area.

Information for this article was obtained from the University of Manitoba Archives.

In the early 1900s, people rushed to claim free homesteads at land offices such as this one in Moose Jaw. However, single women who wanted to homestead faced many obstacles. In May 1910, Mildred Williams stood at the top of the stairs of the Saskatoon land office for twelve days and nights to file on 320 acres of land near Kindersley. She was not alone. That same year, Marie Westphal filed on land near Kindersley that had previously been abandoned by her brother.
